GREENSBORO TELEGRAM.

VOL. VI. NO. 118. GREENSBORO, N. C., WEDNESDAY JUNE 20, 1900. Price Five Cents

M'KINLEY BY ACCLAMATION.

WILL BE NOMINATED THAT WAY.

The Vice Presidential Fight Still Raging, With Roosevelt in the Lead--The Convention Has Been Treading Gingerly All Day and Looking Out for Mines--Platform Adopted--Adjourned Till Tomorrow.

By Wire to the Telegram.

Philadelphia, June 20.—The second day of the Republican convention opened with the prospect that the renomination of the President and the bursts of fervid oratory which it would evoke, would be the chief event of the gathering. But there was an ever-present apprehension on the part of many leaders that this second day might furnish the climax of the great drama by having in store some coup d'etat that would cause a crisis or a stampede not set down in the program. Consequently the most careful precautions have been taken to guard against any such contingency and to prevent the convention's being swept from its feet by any chance tidal wave of popular feeling, yet there existed a vague feeling that it was not best to count on today's proceedings till they were over.

PLATT AND ROOSEVELT STORM.

At last night's caucus Platt and Roosevelt had a stormy time, in which the Rough Rider is said to have shown his bristles. It is report that Platt told Roosevelt, "If you don't take this nomination I promise you that you shall not be renominated for Governor," whereupon Roosevelt quietly remarked, "You can do as you like about that, Senator, I don't care, but remember the threat comes from you, and that in itself is sufficient to make me decline the nomination. o you know how I act when any one attempts to force me?"

THE WEST HANKERS AFTER TEDDY.

It looks like Roosevelt today, and the western crowd says it must be. Hanna finds that he has only 292 votes for Long. A hasty conference was ended at midnight by the administration leaders. When it was heard that New York endorsed Woodruff as a preliminary to a stampede for Roosevelt, the administration forces realized Platt's defiance. It was also known that Kansas could not be swerved from the Rough Rider and would place him in nomination. Hanna said that the President must be consulted. The latter said if the convention wanted Roosevelt, he must be nominated. The sentiment exists that Roosevelt will be nominated on the first ballot. Maryland and California and about the whole west will vote for him.

LODGE PERMANENT CHAIRMAN.

The convention was slow to assemble. Gov. Taylor was again cheered as he entered. Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge, of Massachusetts, was chosen permanent chairman and Chas. W. Johnson, of Minnesota, secretary.

THE ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The nomination for the presidency will follow the report of committees Senator Foraker, of Ohio, nominates McKinley and Senator Thurston seconds the nomination, to be followed by another seconding speech by Roosevelt. The latter, however, may hesitate, owing to his peculiar position. With the conclusion of the speeches and the nomination of McKinley by acclamation, Senator Fairbanks reads the platform.

THE PLATFORM.

The main features of the platform have been well understood in advance. It follows the outline of Wolcott's speech of yesterday, reaffirming the administration's expansion policy and its treatment of Hawaii, Cuba, and Porto Rico, and would subject trusts to the lines laid down in the recent declaration by Ohio Republicans. Protection is reaffirmed, the Nicaragua canal frvored, a rehabilitation of the merchant marine endorsed, and the purchase of the Danish West Indies suggested, winding up with a strong sound money plank.

LODGE'S SPEECH.

In his address of acceptance Lodge said that the tariff was a dead issue, that the gold standard had been firmly planted, low wages had been replaced by prosperity, that peace had nearly been concluded in the Philippines, and that trade is increasing. He also said that China is the greatest of all markets. Lodge finished speaking at 1:32, wuen General Brigham reported from the committee on rules. Quay's reception by delegates was a timely incident and lasted several minutes.

PLATFORM ADOPTED.

At 2:20 Senator Fairbanks began reading the platform, which has already been substantially given above. The platform was adopted and the convention adjourned till ten o'clock tomorrow.

GERMAN AT HIGH POINT.

Correspondence of the Telegram.

High Point, June 20—Messrs. H. A. Millis, W. T. Whitten and other society young men of the town gavea german last night in the opera house complimentary to visiting young ladies. The dancing began about 10 o'clock and lasted after midnight. An orchestra composed of Messrs. Peacock, Arnold and Brigham furnished music for the gay and festive crowd. Several couples graced the floor, among whom were L. H Cartland and Miss Connie Charles; Mr. Fale with Miss Annise Wheeler; Will McAdoo, of Greensboro, with Miss Clara Hamner; C. A. Barbee with Miss Cora Pitts; W. C. Jones with Miss Quuenie McDonald, of Greensboro; W. T. Whitten with Miss Sydnor, of Richmond, Va.; Wescott Roberson with Miss Urma Kellett, of Waco, Texas; P. W. Eshelman with Miss Elizabeth Gurley; H. A. Millis with Miss Courtney Shiplett, of Thomasville; W. P. Fife, jr., with Miss Elma Shiplett, both of Thomasville; C. M. Crawford with Miss Mabrey, of Thomasville; Harry Nissen, of Waughtown, with Miss Mina Alexander. It is useless to say that all enjoyed themselves immensely and no doubt praise the young gentlemen who made it possible for such an enjoyable event.

The negro who attacked the conductor on the train here Monday evening, and who was severely flogged by the engineer of the train and others, was turned loose yesterday on bail to await the coming of the engineer and fireman to appear at the trial.

Dances are few and far between in High Point, but when the young people set their heads to have one they generally do so and succeed nicely—to speak favorably of this kind of pleasure.

A goodly number will go from here to Lexington Saturday to attend the grand White Supremacy rally and barbecue, and best of all to hear the invincible Aycock.

The High Point Cornet Band is getting in readiness to attend the Fourth of July celebration at Guilford battle ground.

Miss Willie Kearns, of Seaboard, is visiting the family of her uncle, Mr. J. W. Harrison, on East Washington street.

Have you noticed the improvement being made on the public well in North High Point?

What is the population of High Point? Aren't you going to guess?

A. H. Michael, of Durham, was a visitor yesterday.

O. Williams came up from Greensboro yesterday.

The Whitsett Prize.

After hearing the excellent essays read last night, Prof. W. T. Whitsett of Whitsett Institute, decided to offer an annual cash prize of $15 to be awarded to the graduate of the State Normal and Industrial College preparing the best essay each year.

The Commercial Cable Company has issued the following notice: "We are advised that the Chinese Government announces that telegrams for Tien-Tsin and Taku, with the entire address in plain language, will be forwarded to Che Foo by mail at the sender's risk. There is a daily steamship service between Che Foo and Tien-Tsin."

ARGUMENT AND PERSUASION.

JUDGE D'ARMOND AT THE NORMAL.

A Great Speech on a Great Theme--Argument and Logic Make a Cold Appeal, While Sentiment and Persuasion Move the Finer Feelings--Those Who Allow Others to Do Their Thinking--Constitutions and Bibles Presented--Certificates and Diplomas Awarded.

The chapel of the State Normal and Industrial College was packed to its utmost capacity this morning by those who had come to witness the graduating exercises of the class of 1900, than which a finer class has never been sent out from any woman's college in the South. On the rostrum were the speakers—Hon. David A. DeArmond, Hon. John H. Small, Hon. W. W. Kitchin; the board of directors, a number of educators, ministers and other visitors of note.

A few minutes before 11 o'clock the stately seniors filed into the hall to the stirring strains of "Dixie" and took seats just in front of the rostrum.

The exercises were opened with a fervent and beautiful prayer by Rev L. W. Crawford, D. D., editor of the North Carolina Christian Advocate. He thanked God for the establishment of the institution and that it occupied so firm a place in the hearts of the people, praying that the people and future legislators might come to appreciatiate it more and more.

The speaker of the day—Hon. David A. DeArmond—was gracefully introduced by Congressman W. W. Kitchin, In the course of his remarks he said, "Truly is this a representative audidience, representative of all that is good and noble and inspiring in North Carolina." He paid a high tribute to Mr. DeArmond, saying he was the keenest debater in the greatest legislative body in the world.

Mr. DeArmond was greeted with a perfect storm of applause, a genuine North Carolina welcome. He said this college must have a peculiarly strong hold on the affections of the people of North Carolina, and justly so. He announced as his subject, "Logic and Sentiment, Argument and Persuasion.' "We begin to live," the speaker said, "because we have to, and not as a matter of choice, and continue to live as a matter of course, and yet the great problem from birth to death is how we shall live. If we would live happy and successful lives we should see to it that integrity, virtue and justice form the foundation of our character. We might be strong without virtue, but it would be a cruel strength. Unless a life is inspired by virtue and directed by intelligence it can never achieve its highest aims and purposes, Argument and logic make a cold appeal, as compared with reason and sentiment, which move the finer feelings. The first named appeals to the intellect, leaving the heart out of the question, and hence the argument often falls barren and dead. Because the mind is often not receptive, a person is swayed more by likes and dislikes than by intellect.

"The most of what many people do is suggested by sentiment rather than by intellect. They do not reason out things; they do not think."

The speaker laid down the proposition that no people on earth have as many opportunities and duties as Americans, saying that our boast of self-government is largely true, but not so largely so as it is often proclaimed. There are always persons to be found to assume the guardianship of others—not for the good of others, but to further their own selfish ends; and unfortunately there is too large a class willing to be led by the designing. They resign to others the business of doing their thinking.

The speaker said one of the greatest lessons of life is the lesson of charity, and spoke of the duty of every person to contribute his might toward assisting all who come within the scope of his influence.

Mr. DeArmond spoke briefly of the glorious deeds of the heroes of North Carolina of the past and of the sacred historic spots in our State, saying, "You North Carolinians have a great name and a proud record to maintain."

In speaking of the greatness of our common country, it was stated that our real dangers are internal and insidious, springing from influences we breed and elements we foster. It behooves every good citizen to look well to the principles of those who aspire to office as well as to the principles of political parties. While our experience with free government has been more successful than that of any other people on earth, it should be remembered that the history of man, so far as free government is concerned, is a record of bright promises, a brief reign, and then a collapse. We can escape the collapse only by guarding against the influences which wrecked other republics. This is to be done by ceaseless intelligence and care.

There is no reason, declared the speaker, why a government founded upon correct principles should ever fail. The people must rule, or others will; they must preserve their freedom, or others will impose tyranny upon them. There is no reason why a free governmeht should not be as lasting as the race of human beings. The question is often asked, What is it that undermines and destroys free government? In the republics of the past there have been three distinct periods. The first is a sturdy period, when people battle and build. Then comes a brilliant, showy period, when the sturdy people are succeeded by those who find things free and easy. The next period is when a spirit of inequality creeps in, when some get too many privileges and others too few. History tells us this condition has preceded the fall and ushered in the ruin of free governments of the past.

Perhaps, said the speaker, there is some appearance of this decay now visible in the United States. During the last few years a separation among the people has taken place. A few have risen to power and wealth, while multitudes have drifted from independence to dependence.

In closing Mr. DeArmond paid a glowing tribute to W. J. Bryan, without mentioning the great leader's name. He spoke of Bryan's great love and consideration for the whole people, saying this man was exceeded by none in eloquence, persuasiveness and tenacity of purpose.

After the close of Mr. DeArmond's address the graduates were presented with copies of the Holy Bible by Bishop Rondthaler, of Winston-Salem, who made a beautiful talk, full of encouragement and good advice.

Hon. John H. Small, who presented the constitutions, was introduced by President McIver, who said there was no citizen of North Carolina to whom the people should give a more cordial welcome than this faithful and earnest representative of the people. When the question of local taxation was before the people two years ago this man, not considering the question of policy or popularity, went out and spoke plainly to the people of their duty to tax themselves for the education of the people; and this in spite of his political aspirations.

Mr. Small's speech was the voice of a statesman telling the people of their highest and noblest duty; the utterance of a man who places the good of his State above all else. Such strong statements of plain truths by public men are so rare that the speech is published in full elsewhere in this paper.

DIPLOMAS AND CERTIFICATES AWARDED.

Certificates in stenography were awarded to the following students in the commercial department who had reached as high a rate of speed as 80 words a minute:

Miss Lena Demuth, 80 words; Miss Mabel Hall, 80; Miss Bessie Howard, 80; Miss Elizabeth Howell, 80; Miss Maade Kinsey, 80; Miss Pearl Lee, 80; Miss Cornelia Michaux, 80; Miss Bessie Roberts, 80; Miss Annie Lee Staley, 80; Miss Ruth M. Harper, 100; Miss Hattie Belo Williams, 110; Miss Blanche E. Folsom, 120; Miss Ida Plonk, 120.

President McIver presented the diplomas, after which he made a few remarks of hope and encouragement to the young graduates.

After the singing of the Long Meter Doxology the benediction was pronounced by Rev. Dr. E. W. Smith, and the commencement of 1900 was ended.

The Journal's Prediction.

By Wire to the Telegram.

New York, June 20.—The New York Journal now predicts that the convention will be stampeded for Roosevelt for president, instead of vice-president.

PEKIN IN HANDS OF FOREIGNERS

CONTROLED BY WESTERN TROOPS.

Reported That Admiral Seymour's Troops Have Captured the City--The Russians Attacked Yesterday on Two Sides--The Legations Were Safe as Late as Sunday. The German Ambassador Not Killed. The Emperor is Missing.

By Wire to the Telegram.

Hong Kong, June 20.—It is reported here that Admiral Seymour's troops have captured Pekin. When the troops entered the city, the emperor was missing, and evidently had been carried off to Manchusia by Yan Yi.

VON KELLER NOT KILLED.

New York, June 20.—Private advices have been received here by members of his family to the effect that there is no truth in the report that Baron Von Keller, the German minister to China, has been killed.

SAFE LAST SUNDAY.

Shanghai, June 20.—In reports from Chinese sources, credited by foreign officials here, it is said that the legations at Pekin were safe Sunday, and that Seymour's international relief column reached Pekin that day.

RUSSIANS AT PEKIN.

London, June 20, 3. a. m.—"The Russian relieving force arrived outside of Pekin this morning," says the Shanghai correspondent of the Daily Express, "and immediately began to attack the city on two sides, employing numerous artillery. The force apparently arrived in the nick of time, for the Chinese assert that the attack upon the legations had been successfully renewed. On the night of June 16 the Chinese troops, under Generals Tung Fuh Siang and Tung Ching, attacked the legations, and set on fire five European buildings. Nothing definite is known as to the result, except that the Chinese were disappointed, although other reports utterly discredited by foreigners here, are that the Chinese, infuriated by the destruction of Taku, have since massacred all the foreigners in Pekin."

A modified version of these rumors received at Berlin is that the French, as well the German minister, has been killed.

The English at Shanghai think the Chinese had foreign advice in organizing the defenses at Taku, because of the precision with which their attack was delivered.

The wires in connection with the harbor mines were cut by the boats of the warships the night before the bombardment. It is now reported at Shanghai that it was on board the Russian cruiser Korietz, and not the Mandschur, that the explosion occurred, killing and wounding more than 50. It is reported that no fewer than 700 Chinese were killed in the forts.

The Shanghai correspondent of The Daily Express says he is officially informed that Japan is mobilizing 25,000 men for immediate transport.

The British cruiser Undaunted arrived at Shanghai yesterday, cleared for action and took up a position commanding the Chinese forts. There are three Chinese cruisers in the harbor.

At Yum Nan Fu, where an uprising has been gathering force for several days, 780 Christians have been attacked at the French mission settlement, many being put to death. The French consul and three missionaries are still in prison.

The disorderly elements have secured the upper hand at Wu Hu and Szechuan, where the native Christians have been massacred.

The Shanghai correspondent of the Daily News, telegraphing yesterday, says: "The Chinese officials here assert that they have news from Pekin up to June 16. The situation was then very serious. Beyond that they claim to have received nothing, but they deny that dispatches have been withheld.

Democratic Convention.

Hon. W. W. Kitchin will address the citizens of Guilford county at the following places:

McLeansville, Monday, July 2nd, at 2 o'clock p. m.

Gibsonville, Monday night, July 2nd, at 8 o'clock p. m.

Pomona, Tuesday night, July 3rd, at 8 o'clock p. m.

All are invited, including the ladies.

AT THE NORMAL LAST NIGHT.

ESSAYS READ BY SIX GRADUATES.

A Wide Range of Interesting Subjects. The Scattered Nation---The Hearing and the Seeing Eye---A Couplet From Burns. Antaeus, the Earthborn Giant---Some Unfamiliar History of North Carolina. Edgar Allen Poe, the Weird and Unnatural.

A very large and representative audience attended the exercises at the State Normal and Industrial College last night. The chapel was filled completely, it being necessary to turn some away. Prof. J. Y. Joyner welcomed the visitors and said the evening had been set apart as a special honor to the class of 1900, six representatives of which would read essays. He added that these essays had been carefully selected by the faculty from those submitted by the entire membership of the class. He introduced Miss Mittie Pender Lewis, who took charge of the exercises and gracefully announced the program.

The first number on the program was a song, "The Dance Invites Us," which was most excellently rendered by the college glee club.

"The Scattered Nation," the first essay was read by Miss Woodfin Chambers, of Alamance county. The essay dealt with that strange and wonderful people, the Hebrew race, in which, as Senator Zeb Vance said in his admirable lecture, is to be found more average wealth, intelligence and moralty than in any other nation of equal numbers in the world. Not only has the Hebrew been able to maintain himself in the business world, but his patriotism is as deep and reverent as any other man's, although the Hebrew is a wanderer upon the face of the earth and has no land he can call his own. In his domestic life also is the Hebrew a model. In no home is more sweet confidencs to be found than in his. The home is the Israelite mother's only kingdom and her children her only subjects.

The essayist referred to the oppropriun resting upon the Hebrew on account of his grasping disposition, saying, if such a charge were true, it was probably due more to treatment he had received from the world than to his natural disposition. For along while he was denied the privilege of owning any real property, which caused him to turn almost his entire attention to money lending and finances. It was asserted that in most instances no more logical reason can be found for our treatment of the Jew than the fact that he is a Jew.

Brief mention was made of the debt we owe this race for our conception of God and in the lines of literature and science.

It was prophesied that in a few years more the long term of wandering will be over and the chosen people of God will again occupy the Holy Land, the wonder and admiration of all the people of the earth.

"The Hearing Ear and the Seeing Eye" was read by Miss Alice Goodridge Daniel, of Granville county. The essay was happily conceived and well written, showing that considerable thought had been bestowed upon its production. As illustrating the wonderful influence exerted by what we see and hear, it was stated that, "to become good and beautiful, one must see the good and beautiful."

A coup'et from Burns, "O wad some power the giftie gie us, To see oursels as others see us," was the subject chosen by Miss Gertrude Jenkins. She treated her subject in a most excellent manner, displaying a true perception of the wish expressed in the verse

Miss Auvila Lindsey, of Rockingham county, read an essay on "Antaus," the earth-born giant who is said by legend to have once met Hercules in a trial of strength. The lesson drawn from the production was that the natural laws are God's laws and that the true and natural are always stronger than the artificial.

Probably the most interesting essay read was "Some Unfamiliar History of North Carolina," by Miss Annie Lee Staley, of Randolph county. The author had delved into the past and learned of several important bits of local history which she recounted in an entertaining manner. She told of Shubal Stearns, the pioneer Baptist preacher, who came to North Carolina from Boston in the year 1755 and located in a section of what is now Randolph county, soon founding Sandy Creek Baptist church. For a time he he was the only Baptist preacher in the State west of Hillsboro. He died soon after the battle of Alamance.

Something was told of the part played in North Carolina politics during Governor Tryon's reign by Herman Husbands, a rich Quaker who came from Pennsylvania. He was elected to the Legislature at Newberne from Orange and Rowan counties, but through the influence of Tryon he was tried for libel and imprisoned. Later he was outlawed, returning to Pennsylvania soon after.

Several incidents of unwritten history were referred to. Miss Staley asserted that in no other respect have North Carolinians been more recreant in the performance of their duty than in preserving their history, much of which is unwritten and fast fading from the memory of man Our State offers a great field to the historian, the novelist, and the poet.

Miss Eleanor Watson, of Rowan county, read the last essay, her subject being "Edgar Allen Poe." She took the position that this strange, weird character was not altogether responsible for his nature and that no poet ever worked more unremittingly than he. In the introduction to his first volume Poe said that poetry was a passion and not an object with him. This statement can be readily believed and understood when it is remembered that the real played a minor role in all his tragedies

FOR THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

ALL ARRANGEMENTS NOW MADE.

The North Carolina Democrats Will Stay at the Carter House, at $5 Per Day. Delegation Will go in Style---Preparations for Unveiling the Vance Monument

Special Correspondence of the Telegram.

Raleigh, June 20—The arrangements are now complete for the trip of the North Carolina delegates to the National Democratic Convention at Kansas City. A special Pullman car, with buffit, will leave here at 3:50 p. m., Sunday July 1, and will go through via Greensboro, Asheville and Memphis, arriving at Kansas City between 9 and 10 a. m. Tuesday. The headquarters of the North Carolina delegation will be at the Carter House, the best hotel in the city. The quarters are secured for four days at $5 a day each. Committeeman Josephus Daniels says that undoubtedly the convention will be in session three days and perhaps four. He, Julian S. Carr and T. M. Gattis,, the committee on arrangements, have made all of the above preparations after consultation with their associates. The car will have suitable inscriptions showing that North Carolina is right in the push. All delegates will go save C. C. Lyon, of Bladen county, whose alternate will attend, so will several other alternates. The delegates who will go are, E. J. Hale, J. S. Carr, Walter E. Moore, Thomas A. Jones, James Parker, J. G. James, R. H. Speight, L. Harvey, E. M. Greene, Josephus Daniels, T. M. Arrington, A. W. Graham, S. M. Gattis, W. C. Dowd, J. A. Brown, J. R. Blair, A. D. Watts, A. C. Avery, G. W. Flower, R. P. Walker, S. Gallert.

National Committeeman Josephus Daniels will leave on Saturday, June 30, as there is to be a meeting of that committee at Kansas City on the morning of Monday, July 2.

Active work will now begin on the preparations for the unveiling of the Vance monument. There is a great deal to be done, of course. There will necessarily be many invitations, not only to persons from this State who represent organized bodies, but to those from other States. Virginians and Marylanders will no doubt be especially considered in this regard, as they were particularly fond of Vance.

Henry Jerome Stockard, the poet, is here. It is a pleasure to know that as a member of the faculty of Peace Institute, he will be a resident of North Carolina.

One of the interesting suburban sights here is a field of 50,000 Bermuda lilies at the experiment farm. They are grown for a Philadelphia firm, as a test, to ascertain whether the lilies are healthy in this climate.

Lord Chamberlain.

The Gifts of Wealth.

"Our wealth is gone," he sobbed, "and with it all that wealth bestowed upon us."

And then, at last, he told her the worst; how that their impoverishment was likely to necessitate their removal from Boston to some community, doubtless, where a disordered digestion was not particularly a plomb.

Clearly His Due.

Pale with astonishment and mortification he rose and confronted the young woman.

"Your answer then, Glycerine McCurdy, is 'no,' is it?"

"It is, Mr. Wellon," she rejoined, with something like scorn.

"It is not what I had a right to expect from you, heartless coquette."

"Oh, it isn't?" she said mockingly. "It ought to have been something else, ought it?"

"Yes," he said, buttoning his coat and putting on his gloves. "To a man of my age you should have said 'No sir.' I wish you good evening, Miss McCurdy."—Chicago Tribune.

SUPPED WITH AN ARAB.

No Forks, No Dishes, No Chairs, No Lights But the Moon—The Fare Good if Not Quite Comprehensible—Washed After Each Course.

Egypt is a place where woman, visiting woman, that is, has some extra perquisites. Supping in the bosom of an Arab family is one of them. If the tourist is on good terms with some dragoman, and is willing to loosen her purse strings a little, she ought to manage an invitation to one of these little suppers without much trouble. We went more than four hundred miles up the Nile and tasted joy and a dozen other even more unfamiliar flavors at Luxor. We felt none the worse for it, either, except perhaps a stiffness of the knees, none of us having been brought up to it tailorwise.

Luxor is a hideous Arab village, squatted on a small part of the ancient site of Thebes. The houses are roofless, rambling huts of Nile mud, with queer round turrets for the storing of grain. Most of the inhabitants are squalid and dirty.

It doesn't sound inviting, and we defy contradiction when we say that it doesn't look inviting. Our dragoman, whom we will call Hassan because that was not his name, was about twenty years old, and could speak English.

The supper was arranged to come on a certain evening, and about 6 o'clock Hassan piloted us from the hotel through a labyrinth of lanes to his house. Hasson summoned his female relatives, consisting of quite a collection of sisters, sisters-in-law, and an aunt or two.

The Arabs evidently think that stars were made before lamps. Later, when the moon climbed up and looked over the mud wall at us, we were glad that the lighting of the feast had been left to nature. Instead of bringing in the lamps which we expected Hassan brought in an immense brass tray, which he placed on folding supports. It wasn't more than two feet high, this dining table, but with considerable cracking of joints we sat down on the cushions which the female relatives placed for us. One sister sat down with us, so that we were five at the table. The female relations, with the exception of the sister who ate with us, retired to the kitchen to accomplish the supper. Hassan, rid of his dusty outer garments, served the meal.

First he brought napkins, and then he brought in one hand a brass bowl, in the other a brass pitcher of warm water. We held our hands in turn over the bowl and Hassan poured the water over them, after which we dried them on our napkins and wondered what would come next. What did come was so much like what it would have been at home that we had a bad moment. It was a sort of bouillon, but was served in brass cups instead of china ones. The resemblance to souvenir luncheons ended there.

Hassan soon appeared with the second course. It was a big bowl of rice, and was deposited in the middle of the table, while a large piece of bread was placed in front of each of us. Not being up in Arab etiquette, we observed a discreet inactivity. We expected plates, but were in doubt whether they would be accompanied by knives, forks or spoons. Our hostess solved our doubts by taking a handful of rice from the bowl and putting it in the hand of her next neighbor. Having fitted each of us with a sticky fistful, she took one herself, and we all fell to.

Much to our relief, Hassan brought the bowl and pitcher round again after the rice episode, and we had a good wash and felt better. The female relatives had not put in an appearance for quite a while, and when the next course arrived we knew it was because they had been too busy. Hassan brought five bowls this time, and set them down in a steaming circle before us. More discreet inactivity on our part, broken again by the hostess taking from one of the dishes various chicken joints and puttng them into our hands. By this time we had given up any foolish fancy relative to plates and knives and forks.

The stuff certainly was good. There was one dish of chicken cooked something after the style of a fricassee. There was a dish of pigeons. There was a dish of veal fried with something which defied Hassan's limited vocabulary, and must, therefore, be nameless. There was a cooked vegetable which was something like celery, but wasn't celery. And finally there was a stew whose ingredients we forebore to ask, for it tasted very good, and we didn't want to lose our appetite for it. Everything was seasoned, well cooked, and so good that we all joined the hostess in wiping up, with pieces of bread, the bits which remained in the bowls and eating them with final demonstrations of satisfaction. The skill displayed by the party after the first attempt led to mutual accusations of previous experience in "sopping."

sa Quack Doctor More Dangerous than a Quack Plumber?

When you are sick why is it that you do not peddle out the job of dosing you, to the lowest bidder? You would get it done much cheaper than your family physician would do it, but some QUACK DOCTOR would get the job. Your plumbing is of vital importance and you can no more afford to have your plumbing done by a quack plumber than to call in a quack doctor when sick.

Give us your work and it will be done properly and price will be reasonable.

Another wash-up (which was much needed) followed this joyous episode of the bowls. Then Hassan brought on a dish of dates stuffed with walnuts. This gave us another shock it was so familiar, but we bore up and did great execution. So we said "Good!" and "Fine!" and "Very nice!" and all the other short words of praise that we could think of. And we nodded our heads and the officiating sister nodded hers, and we could vaguely make out the female relatives nodding theirs back in the shadow. It was "an awfully lovely party."—Miss J. E. CANCER IS NOT INCURABLE

Time was when Cancer was considered as incurable as leprosy. Physicians and friends could give little relief or encouragement to one afflicted with this terrible disease. Even now doctors know of no remedy for this fearful malady; while admitting it to be a blood disease, they still insist that there is no hope outside of a surgical operation, and advise you to have the Cancer cut out, but at the same time cannot assure you that it will not return. You may cut or draw out the sore, but another will come in its place, for the disease is in the blood—is deep-seated and destructive, and beyond the reach of the surgeon's knife or caustic, flesh-destroying plasters. The blood must be purified and strengthened, the system relieved of all poisonous, effete matter before the Cancer sore will heal.

S. S. S. is the only medicine that can overcome this powerful and contaminating poison and force it out of the blood. It builds up and invigorates the old, and supplies new, rich, life-giving blood. S. S. S. is a purely vegetable remedy; no mineral can be found in it; the roots and herbs from which it is made contain powerful purifying properties that act directly upon the blood system and make a safe and permanent cure of Cancer. It has cured thousands, why not you?

Cancer is not always inherited; your family may be free from any taint, yet your blood may become so polluted that a severe and stubborn form of the disease may develop from a sore or ulcer on your tongue or other part of your body; a slight bruise or hurt, a little pimple on the eyelid, lip or nose, a small lump on the jaw or breast, a harmless looking wart or mole, and other causes so insignificant as to attract little or no attention. If you have an obstinate sore, don't rely upon salves or ointments to cure it—begin with S. S. S. at once; it will cleanse your blood and prevent the formation of cancerous cells.

Impure Blood Invites Disease.

Mrs. R. Shirer, La Plata, Mo., writes: "A small pimple came on my jaw about one inch below the ear on the left side of my face. At first it gave me no trouble, and I did not think it was anything serious until the jaw began to swell and became much inflamed. At the same time the sore began to spread and eat into the flesh, and gave me intense pain. I tried everything I could hear of, but nothing did me any good. I then began the use of S. S. S., and after taking several bottles the Cancer healed, and there is now no sign of the disease. This was two years ago, and I am still enjoying perfect health."

WOMEN AS WORKERS.

In her address at the Normal and Industrial College yesterday, Dr. Miriam Bitting-Kennedy made a very forcible plea for the right of women to do whatever work they chose to do. She is not of the usual woman's advocate variety, for she does not demand or advocate a desertion by women of her peculiar duty as queen of the home; she must perform her duties to home first, and then her work may be limited only by her ability and power of endurance. So far as the profession of medicine is concerned, there is no ground for dispute. Nature made woman a physician, and man cannot undo the work of nature. Her touch itself is balm, and her presence is healing. Man, in his age-grown stupidity, has arrogated to himself the sole privilege of studying and practicing this profession, and it is only in recent years that woman has made any attempt to assume her natural position. For one, we are glad that she is now taking the place that man's egotism has denied her.

But while there may be little room for dispute as to whether women should be physicians, there is more reason for disagreement as to her position regarding other work that has heretofore been regarded as suitable only for man. As an academical question it will never be settled; as a practical one woman is quietly settling it for herself, by walking in without ceremony and proceeding to do what she finds to be done. This great exodus of woman from the ranks of namb-pamby donothingism was caused first by necessity, which is the mother of other things beside invention. As women were thrown upon their own resources they began to occupy the various openings, limited though these were, to which they were admitted. For some time the world has been falling in love with the individual who can do, and this fact, too, has helped women along. The women who bebegan to work, by doing it so well, and by making the world accustomed to see women working, made working respectable, and when women had entered business, or took work in the thousand and one ramifications of modern industry, through necessity, other women began to enter through choice and ambition. The professions were not entered by women until this last stage of progress. Women who were compelled to work by necessity, didn't have time to study a profession.

Slowly but surely, women are taking their places beside men, in nearly all the callings in which the latter are engaged. Even staid old North Carolina has a number of female doctors, and one banker, while other states have women in all professions and walks.

MR. CRISP STANDS PAT.

It will be recollected that while Mr. Aycock was in Caldwell county last week, one Mr. J. A. Crisp, assistant postmaster, nominee for the Legislature, and Republican chairman of his county, made an affidavit to the effect that he would vote for the constitutional amendment, having proposed to do so if Mr. Aycock would make a previous affidavit that the amendment would disfranchise no white man. There was a good deal of curiosity to know what effect this action would have on Mr. Crisp's party associations. We note in this morning's Charlotte Observer that he has called his committee together, and in the call says this:

I took this step after mature deliberation, meant it and still mean it. Let him that is without sin among you cast the first stone. Do you say that Mr. Aycock is still insincere? That is not for me to say. If Mr. Aycock would swear to a deliberate lie that is a matter to be settled between him and his God, and certainly would be no excuse for me to break my word. I said "If he would swear it." He did swear it. The above is a plain statement of the facts in the matter and after hearing them I most heartily desire that you take such action as you see fit, without régard to me, and whatsoever your conclusions may be, I assure you that they will be perfectly satisfactory.

Mr. Crisp says further that he is, and has always been, in favor of white supremacy, but has believed the Democratic party was insincere. That does more credit to his heart than his head. It is, however, a matter of congratulation that Mr. Crisp stands up like a man to what he said he would.

THE NORMAL ALUMNAE.

Will Give a Prize For North Carolina History--New Officers.

At a meeting of the Alumnae Association yesterday afternoon it was decided to award a cash prize of $25 each year to the member presenting the best paper on any subject of local North Carolina history. This step was taken in a desire to stimulate interest in our own history, so much of which has never been recorded.

President—Miss Daisy Wait, Raleigh.

First Vice-President—Miss Nannie Strudwick, Hillsboro.

Second Vice-President—Miss Mary Milam, Greensboro.

Secretary and Treasurer—Miss Sallie Davis, Greensboro.

Member Executive Committee—Miss Annie Page, Laurinburg.

About 160 members of the association were present, a larger number than has ever attended any previous meeting.

Elks Called to Meet.

The following named gentlemen will please meet in the parlors of the Southern Loan & Trust Company tonight at 8:30 for the purpose of electing officers for the new Elk Lodge:

JAILS GREATER THAN MINDS

ACCORDING TO THE SUPREME COURT.

Congressman Small's Magnificent Address in Behalf of Education—The Supreme Court Declares That County Commissioners may Levy Taxes for Bridges and Jails, Because They are Necessary, but not for School Houses—The Time Coming When This Construction of our Organic law Will be Changed.

In presenting copies of the constitution of the United States of the State of North Carolina to the graduates of the State Normal and Industrial College this morning, Hon. John H. Small, member of Congress from the First North Carolina District, said:

Young Ladies of the Graduating Class:

I have been delegated to present to each of you copies of the constitution of the United States and of the State of North Carolina. In one of these is embodied the organic law of the State of North Carolina and the other contains the enumeration of the powers which have been granted to the government represented by the Union of the several States and not reserved by the States themselves. I am impressed not only with the uniqueness of this ceremonial but by its appropriateness. It might be asked what particular significance can attach to the presentation of these charts of the body politic to a class of young ladies who have completed their college course and who are about to leave their alma mater.

Not many years ago the few young ladies who left their homes for attendance upon some boarding-school were the conspicuous exception, and by general concession they were supposed to do so only for the purpose of finishing off, as it were, that is to say, to learn something of music, to acquire a smattering of painting and drawing and generally to sip lightly at the Pierean Spring. Their course was generally confined to one year, and if perchance it was lengthened to two sessions, it was only for the purpose of completing the finishing touches deemed necessary to fit them for the delicate ways of society. The noble specimen of the animal called man for generations exhibited a peculiar degree of selfishness regarding the education of women. With all his boasted chivalry and reverence for the gentler sex, in spite of all his millifluous sounding platitudes in their praise, he was content to appropriate unto himself most of the substantial blessings of education. Whether he was actuated in this course by doubt as to their mental equipment or whether because in selfishness he feared the entrance of a rival in life's active duties, is not apparent. He usually took refuge behind the insincere statement that the place for the woman was at home under the benign guidance of her lord and master from whom she could obtain all necessary knowledge, and that it was not necessary that she should possess a disciplined mind or an acquaintance with the intellectual weapons of practical life. The State in its beneficence established at the threshold of its political life our great university for the training of our young men. We established an agricultural and mechanical college for their betterment. With a charity that was unbounded and commendable we established normal schools and other institutions for an inferior race. And lastly when we could no longer withhold this meed of justice we established this institution for the girls of North Carolina and which in my opinion constitutes the chiefest crown of glory for the old North State at the close of the 19th century. And I wish to call attention to the fact that the movement which led to the establishment of this school had its inception with a few of the brightest and brainiest men of this generation, and among those who fought the good fight, who went out among the people and preached the gospel of justice to the women of the State; who continued to knock at the legislative door until success crowned their efforts is the man who is today the chief benefactor of the girls of North Carolina, the President of the State Normal and Industrial College.

[Here the students and visitors gave Dr. McIver almost an ovation. The speaker said that such applause should be more gratifying to a man than to hold the greatest political honors.]

In presenting you with these charts of the body politic I commend them to your careful reading. As with the Book of Holy Writ in which you cannot always interpret the meaning of the words of inspiration but which nevertheless you continue to read in the spirit of pious devotion; so you may not understand all the provisions of these charts and yet you should by constant reference keep them before you as the touch-stone of civic duty and the bulwark of civil liberty. I cannot point out to you in detail the safe-guards which they contain nor the duties which they enjoin and I prefer not to deal in generalities. I will, therefore, content myself with a brief reference to some of the provisions in the constitution of your State which relate to public education. In the declaration of rights, section 27, is this just declaration upon the subject of education: "The people have the right to the privileges of education and it is the duty of the State to guard and maintain this right." I direct your attention to the language. It is not referred to as a charity, or a voluntary gift, or as an act of beneficence from those who have been blessed with property, but it is conceded that the people are entitled to it as a matter of right. This distinction is important and ought always to be maintained and will frequently afford the only solution of the problem for an increase in our public schools. Article 9, upon the subject of education, section 2, provides that the general assembly shall levy taxation for a general system of public schools which shall be free to all the children of the State of school age. Section 3 of this article provides that: "Each county of the State shall be divided into a convenient number of districts in which one or more public schools shall be maintained at least four months in every year; and if the commissioners of any county shall fail to comply with the aforesaid requirements of this section they shall be liable to indictment." These are the provisions in our constitution and they are direct and mandatory in their terms. The layman would assume and the non-resident who reads these words would infer, that the children of every locality, no matter how remote or how sparsely settled would have the opportunity of attending a school for at least four months in each calendar year. However, it is my duty to tell you that this mandatory requirement has been practically eliminated by the construction of our courts and that they have deliberately limited the power of taxation to objects infinitely less worthy of this supreme power of the State. Our courts have said that the commissioners of the counties could not be compelled to levy taxes for the support of schools, although the legislature authorized them so to do, if such levy exceeded a rate of 66⅔ cents on the hundred dollars worth of property, or, $2 on the poll, as provided in article 5, section 1. They have nullified a mandatory provision of the constitution in favor of the the property of the individual. They have placed the dollar above brains and selfishness above duty. In article

7, section 2, it is provided "It shall be the duty of commissioners to exercise a general supervision and control of the penal and charitable institutions, schools, roads and bridges." The courts have held that the Legislature might authorize the county to levy a special tax over and above the constitutional limitation for the purpose of building a jail or of constructing an alms-house or roads, or bridges, or for court houses or for the expense of trying criminals or maintaining prisoners and yet they have denied the same power for the purpose of building school houses and educating the children of North Carolina. I am not seeking notoriety for criticising the courts, and if you wish me so to express it I will say that I am quoting the law as laid down by the Supreme Court of North Carolina and yet I cannot refrain from pointing out to you two conspicuous instances of eminent judges who filed dissenting opinions, the one in the Barksdale case in 1885, and the other in the Bladen County case in 1892 and I am almost constrained to say that these dissenting opinions will yet become law in North Carolina when the leaven of educational sentiment shall permeate the minds and hearts of the people of the State as it will at no distant day. I refer to those two eminent jurists—Judge Merriman, ever the bold champion of the cause of the people, and of Judge Avery, who yet lives to illustrate his zeal and his ability. Again, while the courts have held that the Legislature may authorize the county commissioners to levy a tax over and above the constitutional limitation for the specific purpose of building jails, court houses, bridges and feeding prisoners and yet they hold that the same Legislature may not authorize the county to levy a special tax for the purpose of building school houses or educating the children without first submitting the same to the qualified voters and the decision is put upon the ground that the bridges and the jails are necessary expenses while schools are not.

Local taxation affords the best means of lengthening the school term. These taxes are sanctioned by legislative authority and approved by the vote of the community. Thus the people become identified with the maintenance and the operation of their schools. They feel that the taxes are not levied by some distant authority, but by their own volition and thus they become interested in their management and take pride in the prestige of their success. Local taxation has brought to numerous cities and towns in the State a system of graded public schools which are the pride of their people and are rapidly taking first rank among the schools of the country. They are furnishing employment for trained teachers, who are likewise furnishing pupils for the normal schools and these are furnishing a disciplined army of educational workers ready to go out into the fields where the harvest is ripe. Local taxation will furnish the remedy for short term schools in all the rural communities of the State and should be encouraged by all means at the command of the educators and public men and women who have enlisted for the cause of increased public school facilities in every section of the State.

I have been asked to declare the faith that is in me upon the question of education. What convictions I entertain upon this subject may interest very few persons and yet I do not hesitate to proclaim them. I believe that every child has the right to demand of the State and of the community in which he lives that the facilities of the public school shall be afforded him, which shall be as free and gracious as the sunlight of heaven. I believe it is the duty of every citizen, both upon general principles and by constitutional enactment, to pay his taxes upon the property with which God has blessed him, for the the purpose of maintaining these schools for the benefit of the children of the State. I believe there is no better investment which the tax-payer can make of his means, or which will yield him a better return, and I know there is no expenditure of revenue more productive of benefit to the State or of blessings to the child than for this sacred purpose. I believe it is the duty of every man, and particularly the young men, and of the young women of the State to stand upon these ramparts and proclaim these fruitful truths until the conviction shall overtake the men and women of the State and the school house and the trained school teacher are brought within reach of the poorest and most the inaccessible child. The time for plain speaking has come and I am glad to say that this fact is being recognized. The young and aspiring man who seeks political promotion and advancement and the intellectural young woman who wishes to do her State a service and bring her name into good repute can find no surer avenue for the accomplishment of their purposes than to get in the procession and stand for the cause of education. As I read in the newspapers, I am glad to say that one of the candidates for the high office of Governor of the State, a man of education, a learned advocate and a broad publicist and withal an unerring interpreter of the signs of the times, is today going about among the people proclaiming that the greatest issue of the present and of the future is the education of our children. So may it be with all the candidates of all political parties. We invite discussion of this issue. We challenge debate because we not only have the organtic law of our State to sustain us, but the promptings of a high sense of duty—a high ideal of citizenship.

Young ladies, the records of this institution show that more than 90 per cent. of the young women who have received its instruction became teachers, and most of the teachers in our public schools. In the name of your alma mater and in graceful recognition of the future progress of the State which has made your presence possible today, in recognition of the zealous work and of the precepts and examples of this splendid corps of teachers, who have illustrated by their lives their devotion to the girls of North Carolina, I urge you as you emerge from these walls and enter the arena of life that you impress upon the children who come in your presence and under your tuition the rights of duties and responsibilities of citizenship and above all impress upon them that the public schools afford the only remedy to dispel the blight of illiteracy and to bring the light of knowledge to every child. Unto you a great opportunity is given to mould the minds and hearts of the future men and women of this commonwealth and to participate in this progressive movement for the education of all the children of the State. If you lead in this vanguard and hold aloft the banner of light there are thousands who will bring up the rear and lend you gallant support. In the words of this charter you represent "general morality religion and knowledge" and we wish you God-speed and a happy life.

AN INDIAN LEGEND

On the James A. Holmes farm, and near the point where the rippling waters of Laughery creek pour into the great Ohio, is an Indian burial mound of more than ordinary interest, because of the sad and tragic history of the young brave and the faithful Indian girl, whose bodies have long since mouldered away beneath the pyramid of soil and stone.

Many years after the pale faces had pushed the red men further and further westward, it still was the custom of the remaining members of the straggling bands of Indians to return each autumn and pay a visit to the tomb of the young chief, Kekoleah, and the Indian girl, Lakaloah, who, when unable to become his bride in life, chose to be his in death rather than suffer separation from him.

About a century and a half ago the wigwams of the Pottawatomies and Delawares were pitched on the point of land on the south side of Laughery creek, where that stream enters into the Ohio. The season was the most beautiful of all the year—Indian summer. The days were dreams of beauty, and the nights were still more wondrously beautiful, lighted by the mellow, silvery light of the full October moon.

Kekoleah (Swift Foot) was the son and only child of the chief of the Pottawatomies, and from early boyhood he had given promise of becoming a great leader of his people. In using the arrow none could compete with Kekoleah; in spearing fish while they swam about in the deep, blue depths of Laughery, no hand was so unerring as his. In all the tribe there was none so swift of foot as this daring son of the old chieftain. This young brave would chase a deer and capture it without the aid of weapons by following it until it became his prize from sheer exhaustion.

Sunsewattama, chief of the Delawares, had only one child—a daughter. Lakalah (Bright Eyes) was beautiful and as graceful as the pliant willows which she wove into baskets. The good feeling between the two tribes had ever been secure, but soon it was to be welded still more firmly by the union of these two children of the ruling chieftains.

As was the custom, a long series of amusements was to be observed during the month prior to the marriage, the first of which was to be a grand hunt along the shaded banks and wooded hills of that beautiful stream —Laughery.

The young men were impatient for the hunt to begin, and finally, headed by their fiery and impetuous leader, Kekoleah, they started up mud lick toward the point where Dillsboro now stands. On the brow of a big hill, which is now a part of the John Spear farm, a deer was started, and swift in pursuit followed the nimble-footed Kekoleah. The deer, a fine buck, started from the crest of the hill, crossed ravine after ravine, pointing his course toward Laughery, near where the party was camped, and at a point now known as Winter's ford.

Just within a few yards of the creek bank the deer bounded over the trunk of a fallen tree and Kekoleah, attempting to follow, and while leaping over the same tree, was impaled on a broken limb. This jagged stubb pierced his heart. Instantly the death-cry of the Pottawatomies was raised by the horrified young braves and soon answered by the wails from the Indian maidens at the camp.

The body of Kekoleah was carried to camp. The grief of the old chief, when he learned that his son, the pride of the Pottawatomies, was a corpse, was terrible. The girl, Lakaloah, threw herself across the breast of the lifeless warrior and locking her arms about his neck, refused to be taken away. Thus she remained for hours, when finally she became unconscious and was removed to the wigwam of her father.

Early the next morning the camp was astir with preparations to take the homeward march with the body of Kekoleah. Then a shout went over the camp that Lakaloah was not in her wigwam. At this juncture there came the death-cry, not of the Pottawatomies, but of the Delawares, and in the high treble of a woman's voice!

The braves started for the spot whence the sound came and in a short time came to a bend in the creek, from which they could look across and view the spot where Kekoleah met death. There they beheld the beautiful Indian girl seated on a bough of a tree which overhung the creek. Softly rocking on the green bough and never heeding the hungry and rushing waters beneath her, her long raven hair blown about her by the wind, the maiden sat and sang the death cry of her tribe.

As the pursuing party approached her she turned her face toward them and waved a fond farewell. Then rising to her feet she sprang out and down, alighting in the rushing stream. She came only once to the surface and sank again beneath the muddy waves. Runners of the tribe attempted to keep up with the current of the stream and thus again see the body of the beautiful Lakaloah, but in this they failed.

Slowly the funeral march was taken up, and at night a stop was made where the village of Hartford now stands. The next morning the march was about to be resumed, and all was in readiness when a cry was heard coming from the creek whither the father of Lakoloah had gone. Running to the creek bank and pulling aside the dense growth of the willows the braves saw the old chief kneeling by the side of the drowned girl, whose body lay on the whitened sand. Her long hair had caught on the limb of a tree. Thus the body of her who was a widow before she was a bride was restored and placed on the litter by the side of him who was to have been her lord and master. The bodies were carried to the Indian village and buried, where side by side they still rest.—Grace Pate in Indianapolis News.

Nothing that has ever yet been produced in the way of summer footwear for men will begin to compare for comfort, coolness and durability with shoes made of tan vici kid. If you have never tried shoes made of this material, ask any man who has worn them and you will find him ehthusiastic in their praise. But it is possible to have too much of a good thing and we find ourselves overstocked with certain lines of tan vici shoes. So in order to reduce the surplus, we have cut some fifty pairs of the $3.50, $3.00 and $2.75 grades down to $2.48. You can see the samples of these in our north window the rest of this week and if you are going to need another pair of shoes this summer it will be worth your while to stop and take a look at these. WINE OF CARDUI

A SURE MEDICINE.

HANDSOM, VA., Dec. 21.

I have been suffering from female weakness for four years, and have taken many medicines, but Wine of Cardui and Black-Draught have done more for me than anything else.

MRS. CAROLINE EVANS.

McELREE'S
Wine of Cardui

It is a mistake to take any and every kind of medicine when you are sick. There is danger in it. Most of the so-called cures for "female weakness" do nothing more than deaden the pain temporarily, and when the effect wears away the patient is weaker and sicker than before. It is never wise to take chances. You have only one life, and that is dear and precious. If you have any pain, ache, disorder or weakness in the feminine organs, nothing will help you like Wine of Cardui. It helps do away with morning sickness during the early stages of pregnancy, and modifies the pains of childbirth; recovery is rapid and future health is assured. The Wine is purely vegetable, being made of herbs whose medicinal properties act directly upon the organs of womanhood. It is a long-tried remedy, and has many years of success behind it. It is sure. Why take a chance medicine when you can get a sure medicine?

THE SOUTH IN THE NEXT HOUSE.

BOTH SIDES ARE CLAIMING GAINS.

Some Additional Members May Come to the South as a Result of the Census Enumeration—A Solid Delegation From North Carolina—Republicans Expecting Something in Virginia.

Special to the Telegram.

Washington, June 20—Democrats in making their predictions relative to capturing the House of Representatives rely to some extent upon making gains in the Southern States. Democratic politicians from the South say that this claim will be realized in the November elections. It is likely that the result of the census enumeration will give the South a few additional members in Congress, but this would likely be offset by more gains in the western States. However, the gains, if any from this source would not effect the next House of Representatives, but would the House after that. It is thought at that time that Florida may get one additional member, and already, with this in view candidates for Congress are springing up in the Peninsula State. As a result of the census enumeration Georgia, Texas and perhaps one or two other States in the South may have their representation increased.

The House, however, is close at hand, and it is to this that both parties are now paying their closest attention. It is conceded that there will be gains in certain districts, though the Republicans claim certain other districts in lieu of these they now hold.

Among the Democrats, Virginia, it is claimed will give a Democratic gain of one, the seat represented by Dr. Wise, who was seated on a contest, ousting Mr. Young, who on the face of the returns was elected to the last Congress by a large majority.

North Carolina Democrats are confident of their ability to carry all of the nine congregational districts in their State, including that of White, the colored cogressman. This will give the party a gain of three votes. West Virginia may give a gain of one member, and Texas it is claimed will elect a solid Democratic delegation, there being in the present House one Republican, Mr. Hawley. Mr. Hawley is very popular in his district, however, and the Republicans claim that he cannot be defeated. On the other hand they claim that Texas will give him a colleague in the House next Congress.

The Republicans are making claims also of gains in the South. They say that the Ninth Virginia district and Tenth district of the same State are naturally Republican, and that in a presidential contest the popularity of President McKinley will be sufficient to defeat the sitting members. They also claim that they have a fighting chance in the 2nd, and 4th Virginia districts.

North Carolina Republicans do not concede any gains to the Democrats, but claim that both Linney and White will be returned. The Republicans claim they have as good a chance of defeating two members of the North Carolina delegation, as the Democrats have of defeating Linney and White.

West Virginia Republicans claim a solid delegation, which if materialized in the elections will give them a gain of one. Texas, it is claimed, as already stated, will show a gain of one Republican.

In the matter of claims it is seen heretofore that both parties in the South are on about an equal footing.

Senator Pritchard's friends say that he will receive a handsome complimentary vote from the South on the first ballot. They claim the North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida and other delegations.

Virginia on the first ballot at Philadelphia will vote for Senator Scott, the favorite son of her name-sake, West Virginia.

THE RESEMBLANCE.

Why He Was Reminded of the Great Webster.

A story is told of a member of congress, who enjoyed the reputation of being able to drink more whisky without showing it than any other man in the house.

One day he visited a barber shop for the purpose of getting his hair cut, and was ministered unto by a colored artist, who made two or three attempts at discourse on different subjects, finally remarking that his customer was by no means the only distinguished man who had occupied that particular chair.

"I suppose not," grunted the congressman.

"There was Daniel Webster, sah," said the negro, starting in on the shampoo. "He done sot in this chair dozens of times."

"Indeed!" replied the customer.

"You remind me very much of him, sah."

"In what respect?" asked the statesman, waking up. "In the shape of my head?"

"No, sah."

"In my manner of speaking?"

"No, sah."

"In what way, then, do I resemble the immortal Daniel?"

"In your breff, sah."—Boston Herald.

CATARRH CAN BE CURED BY

Johnston's Sarsaparilla

QUART BOTTLES.

"DANGER IN THE EARTH AND AIR; DANGER EVERYWHERE."

A Wise and Venerable Doctor Talks about Advanced Science.

In a leading hotel, in a great city, a famous and aged physician was conversing. Listening to his wise and sententious discourse, were a group of well dressed men, evidently lawyers, business men and commercial travelers.

My firm belief, is "that medical science is certain yet to show that all diseases without exception are caused by invisible germs which are living organisms. Here is the germ of that terrible disease diphtheria. Here is the bacillus of typhoid fever; and here is the still more dreadful bacillus of tubercle which causes that most destructive of all diseases, consumption. This of that very common and supposed incurable disease, catarrh."

"I wish, Doctor," said the traveling man, "that you would tell us about catarrh. I have had it for years, and I am thoroughly discouraged."

The Doctor answered. "Catarrh, like diphtheria, consumption, typhoid fever, and a host of other diseases, is the result of a microbe invading the blood and attacking specially the mucous membrane. This foul and most disgusting disease is especially prevalent in the United States and it is rare to meet one who is not, or has not been troubled more or less with it. How often is he or she obliged to remain at home from pleasant entertainments, deprive themselves of many intellectual treats, from fear of the disagreeable odor arising from catarrhal affections. In its worst phase, the patient becomes loathsome both to himself and his friends.

"I believe," continued this great physician, "that the true way to heal catarrh is to medicate the blood. This can be done only by powerful alteratives which act as blood purifiers."

Betsy A. Marett, of Manistee, Manistee Co., Mich., writes:

Dear Sirs:—For ten years I was a sufferer from general debility and chronic catarrh. My face was pale as death. I was weak and short of breath. I could hardly walk, I was so dizzy and had a ringing in my head all the time. My hands and feet were always cold. My appetite was very poor. On getting up in the morning, my head swam so I was often obliged to lie down again. I had awful pains in the small of my back. I had a continual feeling of tiredness. My muscular power was almost entirely gone, and I couldn't go half a dozen steps without stopping to rest, and often that much exercise caused me to have a pain in my side. It seemed as though the blood had left my veins. The doctors said my blood had all turned to water. I had given up all hope of ever getting well. I tried the best physicians in the state, but failed to get any relief. My husband got me a bottle of Johnston's Sarsaparilla. I took it, and then I bought another. When these had been used, I was somewhat improved in health. I continued its use, and felt I was growing stronger; my sleep was refreshing, and it seemed as if I could feel new blood moving through my veins. I kept on taking it, and now consider myself a well and rugged woman. I work all the time, and am happy. I am positive that the Sarsaparilla saved my life. The sick headaches I have had since childhood, have disappeared, and my catarrh has almost entirely left me. I cannot be too thankful for what Johnston's Sarsaparilla has done for me. I recommend all women who have sick headaches to use your Sarsaparilla.

STAND BY IT, SAYS MORGAN.

There are Some Socialistic Frills That Might be Clipped, but it is Best to Stand by the Chicago Instrument.

Knoxville, Tenn., June 19.—In a letter to G. F Milton, editor of the Sentinel, and delegate to the Kansas City convention, Senator John T. Morgan, of Alabama, thus expresses his views concerning the platform to be adopted at Kansas City:

"The horses are named and entered for the race, and the riders weighed and in the saddle, so both parties are trying to find the smoothest ground to run over. Our smoothest path is that which we have beaten out with the tramp of Democracy since Jefferson blazed the way and Jackson opened it. The Chicago platform is a true exposition of this creed, though it has a few marginal notes that are rather too socialistic. Bryan has added some that we can afford to ignore; others will be attempted in the Populistic direction; New York will attempt to rewrite it, and put Bryan's picture over it as an index to its meaning. The safe course is to stand by it. The people will understand us if we do that. A new alignment will lose us more than we gain."

Meeting of Normal Directors.

The directors of the State Normal and Industrial College were in session this morning, receiving reports, passing upon diplomas and transacting other routine business. The following members of the board were present:

Hon. W. D. Turner, Statesville; W. P. Shaw, Winston; John Graham, Warrenton; J. A. Blair, Asheboro; J. F. Post, Wilmington; Hon. R. D. Gilmer, Waynesville; Hon. John E. Fowler, Clinton; S. M. Gattis, Hillsboro, and Dr. J. M. Spainhour, Lenoir, secretary of the board.

Hon. C. H. Mebane, chairman ex-officio of the board, arrived from Newton on the noon train.

To Play Off a Tie.

The next game of baseball will be played June 22nd, between the Greensboro team and the Southern Railway boys. Each team has won a game and the tie will be hotly contested.
